The brain is one of the core part of the body. The brain, like any other tissue in the body, is made up of individual cells which are much smaller than a pinpoint, and require a microscope to see them. These cells are the smallest units which compose the brain, and there are several different types. A brain cancer can arise from any of the cells which make up buy couple pack (male & female viagra) online in Australia brain

Brain cancer starts in just one cell. As the cell makes more and more copies of itself, it grows to form a tumor which means a swelling. A benign tumor stays where it starts, although it can grow very large buy couple pack (male & female viagra) online in Australia press on crucial areas. In contrast, a malignant tumor has a capacity to spread, and is then called "brain cancer". "Primary" brain cancer starts within the brain, and is the main subject of this transcript. In contrast, "secondary" brain cancer starts in some other organ like lung or breast and then spreads to the brain.

This is called "brain metastasis". Like any cancer, the exact reason why one person gets brain cancer and another doesnt is unknown. However, several things have been found to increase the risk of developing brain cancer 3 Exposure to radiation has also been connected to developing brain cancers as well buy couple pack (male & female viagra) online in Australia other malignancies. The risk is greater if the person is exposed to at a young age to a higher dose.

Pre-existing benign type tumors may become cancerous called "malignant degeneration if radiated. This depends upon where in the brain the cancer arises, and how big it becomes before coming to medical attention. The brain has particular areas controlling thought, sight, hearing, sensation, movement, coordination and mood. The upper brain area tends to control the more advanced thought functions, while the middle controls mood and movement and the rear or "brain stem" stimulates breathing and heart rate.
