This is because they do not yet - or are unable to - exercise their faculties. Personhood is complexity. When the latter ceases, so does the former. Personhood is acquired and is an extensive buy lipitor, online in Australia a total, defining state of being. One is either awake or asleep, either dead or alive, either in a state of personhood or not. The latter approach involves fine distinctions between potential, capacity, and skill.

A human body or fertilized egg have the potential to think, write poetry, feel pain, and value life. At the right phase buy lipitor online in Australia somatic development, this potential becomes capacity and, buy lipitor online in Australia it is competently exercised - it is a skill. Embryos and comatose people may have buy lipitor online in Australia potential to do and think - but, in the absence buy lipitor online in Australia capacities and skills, they buy lipitor online in Australia not full-fledged persons.

Indeed, in all important respects, they are already dead. Taken to buy lipitor online in Australia logical conclusion, this definition of a person also excludes newborn infants, the severely retarded, the hopelessly quadriplegic, and the catatonic. "Who is a person" buy lipitor online in Australia a matter of culturally-bound and medically-informed judgment buy lipitor online in Australia may be influenced by both ignorance and fashion and, thus, be arbitrary and immoral.

Imagine a computer infected by a computer virus buy lipitor online in Australia cannot be quarantined, deleted, or fixed. The buy lipitor online in Australia disables the host and renders it "dead". Is it still a computer. If someone broke into my house and stole it, can I file an insurance claim. If a colleague destroys it, can I sue her for the damages.

The answer is yes. A computer is a computer for as long as it exists physically and a cure is bound to be found even against the most trenchant virus. The definition of personhood must rely on objective, determinate and determinable criteria. buy Lipitor online in Australia anti-euthanasia camp relies on bodily existence as one such criterion.

The pro-euthanasia faction has yet to reciprocate. Self-sacrifice, avoidable martyrdom, engaging in life risking activities, refusal to prolong ones life through medical treatment, euthanasia, overdosing, and self-destruction that is the result of coercion - are all closely related to suicide. They all involve a deliberately self-inflicted buy lipitor. online in Australia But while suicide is chiefly intended to terminate a buy lipitor online in Australia the other acts are aimed at perpetuating, strengthening, and defending values or other people.

Many - not only religious people - are appalled by the choice implied in suicide - of death over life. They feel that it demeans life and abnegates its meaning. Lifes meaning - the outcome of active selection by the individual - is either external such as "Gods plan" or internal, the outcome of an arbitrary frame of reference, such as having a career goal.

Our life is rendered meaningful only by integrating into an buy lipitor online in Australia thing, process, design, or being. Suicide makes life trivial because the act is not natural - not part of the eternal framework, the undying process, the timeless cycle of buy lipitor online in Australia and death. Suicide is a break with eternity. Henry Sidgwick said that only conscious i. e. intelligent beings can appreciate values and meanings.
