* Dr. Szent-Gy?rgyi, Gy?rgyi became interested in a chemical agent, present in plant juices, which had the effect of delaying oxidation, such as the browning of a sliced apple exposed to the air. He suggested that this agent, which was also present in cabbages and oranges, was the mysterious Vitamin. By 1933, he had isolated buy metrogl dg online in Australia substance in kilogram lots and named it "ascorbic acid" which means "the acid which prevents scurvy." In buy Metrogl dg, online in Australia he won the 1937 Nobel Prize for his discovery of vitamin C.

He was the first to predict buy metrogl dg online in Australia use of Vitamin C for cancer. Irwin Stone, PhD Irwin Stone became interested in the anti-oxidant properties of ascorbic acid, then newly discovered, as a means of protecting food against deterioration. He continued his study of vitamin C for the next 50 years, and in the 1950s he established that humans would benefit from ingesting much larger amounts of ascorbates than the medical and nutritional establishments considered adequate.

Fredrick Klenner. "In the early 1950s, Dr. Fredrick Klenner began his work with mega doses of vitamin C. He used doses up to 100 grams per day orally or intravenously. In clinical reports he recorded the excellent response he saw when it was given in large doses. buy Metrogl dg online in Australia example, polio patients given vitamin C suffered no residual defects from their polio.

A controlled study in England on 70 children, half given vitamin C and half given placebo, confirmed that none of the ascorbates treated cases developed any paralysis while up to 20 percent of the untreated group did. This study was buy metrogyl dg online in Australia published because the Salk Vaccine had just been developed and no one was interested in vitamins. Klenner's buy metrogyl dg online in Australia was ignored.

" Dr. Klenner was the first physician to emphasize that small amounts of ascorbates do not work. He said, "If you want results, use adequate ascorbic acid. " As a result of seeing consistent cures of a great variety of viral and bacterial diseases with huge doses of vitamin C, he published over twenty medical reports. buy Metrogyl dg online in Australia medicines rejection of his lifesaving work stands as a reminder to all medical mavericks practicing today. "Some physicians," Klenner wrote, "would stand by and see their patient die rather than use ascorbic acid because, in their finite minds, it exists only as a vitamin.

" Dr. William J. McCormick. Over 50 years ago, it was Toronto physician William J. McCormick, M.
